TOPICS & PANELISTS

I. THE CRIMINALIZATION OF RACE AND POVERTY

The panel will examine how and why police are more likely to target certain individuals because of their race, social class, or where they live. Panelists will also discuss the cycle of crime as it relates to incarceration and recidivism, the negative consequences that this creates, and possible solutions to the problem.

Panelists:

- PROFESSOR JEFFREY FAGAN, Columbia Law School
- PROFESSOR JONATHAN SIMON, University of California, Berkeley School of Law
- TRISTIA BAUMAN, National Law Center on Homelessness and Poverty

II. SENTENCING POLICY AND MASS INCARCERATION

The panel will focus on the trend of criminalization and the impact it has had on incarceration. Panelists will also examine our country's prison systems and the problems that have been created through the radicalization of punishment and the recent movement away from heavy sentencing.

Panelists:

- PROFESSOR FRANKLIN ZIMRING, University of California, Berkeley School of Law
- PROFESSOR DOUGLAS BERMAN, Ohio State University Moritz College of Law
- NICOLE PORTER, The Sentencing Project

III. THE CRIMINALIZATION OF IMMIGRATION LAW

Since the Supreme Court's landmark opinion in INS v. Lopez Mendoza in 1984, categorizing immigration proceedings as civil in nature, the immigration laws and the ways in which they are enforced have become increasingly criminal. The panel will examine the issues criminalization has created and what procedural and substantive protections should be in place as a result.

Panelists:

- PROFESSOR DANIEL KANSTROOM, Boston College Law School
- PAROMITA SHAH, National Immigration Project of the National Lawyers Guild
- PROFESSOR ALLEGRA MCLEOD, Georgetown Law

CRIMINALIZED JUSTICE: Consequences of Punitive Policy

The University of Miami Law Review Symposium, entitled "Criminalized Justice: Consequences of Punitive Policy," will take a critical look at how our nation's laws have been increasingly criminalized over the past thirty years, the negative consequences of this criminalization, and recent positive developments. We will explore this topic through a variety of subjects, including sentencing policy, immigration, homelessness, and race and social class.
